The Money Market Has Little to En courage the Leaders-Local Trade Highly Unsatisfactory.

At New York Saturday money on call was nominally 14,014 per cent.

Prime mercantile paper, 31/264 per cent. Sterling exchange was strong, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.87\4@4.88 for demand and at $4.861/4@4.861/2 for sixty days; posted rates, $4.86\604.87 and $4.880

4.8819; commercial bills, $4.8514. Bar silver, 62e; Mexican dollars, 481/2c; silver certificates closed at 62@621/2c.

New York for the week were: Gold, $10,-100; silver, $964,560. The imports were: Gold, $4,942; silver, $48,523; dry goods, $3,679,306; general merchandise, $8,596,555.

The money market still offers little encouragement to those who lead it. Call loans have been made at 114 during the week, which is a new record. The exchange situation offers some apparent contradictions which are hard to reconcile. The price of exchange continues to harden, the demand rate for actual business reaching $4.87% 44.88 on Saturday. This is in the face of recent lowering of the Bank of England's minimum rate of discount to 21/2 per cent, and an open market rate in London of considerably less than half that. The foreign trade statement for March issued last week also shows the trade balance maintained in our favor by a large increase in exports, in spite of the increase of imports, the excess of exports reaching $10,000,000. The increase in the price of sterling exchange is difficult to account for in the face of these conditions, Gold continues to be shipped to Japan and Austria from London, though without appreciable effect on the monetary situation there. The New York weekly bank statement shows the following changes: Reserve, increase $796,,850 Deposits, increase 2,942,600 Circulation, decrease 134,490

The banks now hold $46,866,900 in excess of the requirements of the 25-per-cent, rule. The New York Financier says: "According to the statement issued by the Associated Banks of New York city for the week ending April 17, the clearing-house institutions gained $1,522,500 in cash and increased their deposits $2,942,600. As loans expanded $1,475,600, the change in the deposit item agrees closely with the expansion in the other totals. The gain in cash, however, was not as large as the move-ment of the week had indicated. The flow of funds to this center has been unusually heavy during the past few days, and, despite the increase of one and one-half millions in loans, the reserve is larger than at the close of business one week ago. It is not improbable that the loan increase represents the business of that period, as the demand for money is now at a low ebb and rates are establishing new records. especially in the call-loan branch, A matter of some moment just at present is the course of foreign exchange. If the de-mand for gold on the part of Japan and Austria continues, there is a strong probability that specie will be exported from the United States. The present exchange quotations are under the shipping point, but the drain on the Bank of England has resulted in a net loss of gold to that institution of not less than $10,000,000 within the past week, and there is nothing to indicate nat it will abate to any extent soon. The movement from the United States, if gold is actually exported, will not be on account trade conditions here, but will reflect, rather, the change in the Japanese monetary standard and the war preparations in Surope. The domestic situation does not warrant exports at the present time, although continued importations of merchandise in heavy volume may reduce our foreign balances materially.

Total sales of stocks to-day were 74,600 shares, including the following: American lington & Quincy, 8,600; Chicago Gas trust receipts, 15,600; St. Paul. 7,000.

STOCKS ON THE DECLINE. The tendency of prices downward Saturrupted for very brief periods, and no rallies short trading day and coming after a holiday. The fact that the foreign exchanges were closed and would remain so until Tuesday also had its effect on curtailing operations. The market was narrow and the small dealings wholly professional, and, in the specialties, largely manipulative. The international stocks continued to manifest heaviness, notwithstanding the closing of the London Exchange, dealers in New York relying on their own private advices as to war prospects abroad and some sales of these stocks being made deals for London account. The rise in the price of wheat was interpreted on the Stock Exchange as presaging a belligerent outcome to the dispute in southwestern Europe. This was used as a bear argument, the price of railroad stocks moving contrary to the price of wheat, as has been the case in connection with war news with Europe recently on several occasions. The grangers are usually the exception, and Burlington advanced a small fraction at one time and suffered a smaller net decline than the other grangers. St. Paul suffered from the showing of a loss of $5,343 in its estimated gross earnings for the second week in April, and Northwest and Omaha manifested a weakness common to the other Vanderbilt stocks. There was a falling off in activity in Sugar, and very narrow fluctuations in its price. Chicago Gas continued to be the center of activity in the markets, but its fluctuations were without significance other than professional, the price receding in the face of buying by the interests that have uniformly been credited with acting for insiders. Missouri Pacific enjoyed a period of gain at the opening, but afterward succumbed a point, scoring a net loss on the day. Losses on the day reached a point in Tobacco, of in New York Central, % in Northwest, isquehanna preferred, Tennessee Coal and Iron and % in Rock Island, Omaha & St. Paul. Adams Express rose 11/2 in the final

SAVINGS DEPARTMENT to 21/2 points. Burlington was an exception in the railroad list and closed the week 1/8 higher than last Saturday night. The grangers as a group enjoyed some advantages over the general railroad list, the threatening aspect of foreign affairs and the strength in the wheat market being rather in their favor. Although the general like news from abroad, on the ground that all property would suffer in value from the Milkers, common to medium, per head 18.00@25.00 resulting disorganization of credits, the belief is general in Wall street that the value crease ultimately in the event of war All were sold in good season, the closing being abroad. The decline on the week has been accompanied by an almost stagnant condition of trading, the market having awakened into a spasmodic activity on only one or two occasions. The duliness was in part due to the short week with the Good Friday interim and the foreign exchanges continuing closed on Saturday. This had the effect of discouraging trading on the days preceding, the transactions on Thursday being largely confined to evening up contracts. The dullness and the heaviness which it accentuated had the effect of nullito hopefully to broaden the demand for stocks. Prices have been more or less dominated all week by the reflected depression from the London exchange, where not only the Eastern question was a depressing influence, but also the demoralization in the Kaffir securities and the whispers of financial embarrassment of their leading pro-

EFFECT OF THE FRAUDS. The revelations that have been made of fraudulent transactions by bogus brokers and of the astounding dimensions of the business done by "sure thing" advertisers has been a somewhat depressing influence on business, so far as outside inquiry is concerned, and the Stock Exchange authorities, as well as those of the Consolidated Exchange, are earnestly co-operating with the federal authorities to put a stop to the nefarious business, in the interest of legitimate speculation in stocks. These elements of dullness left the market narrow and almost entirely in the hands of professionals, who took advantage of it to manipulate one or two stocks so as still further to depress the market of the New York Central bonding operation, announced on Wednesday was disappointing to those who had drawn parallel in their minds with the Lake Shore operation and its results. The Lake Shore issue of $50,000,000 at 31/2 per cent. interest was followed by such an improve- lambs, $5. ment in prices and tone and such a broadening of demand as had not been witnessed for many months, and was only stopped, while yet at full speed, by the announcement of the transmissouri decision of the Supreme Court. Then New York Central FOREIGN WAR NEWS ASSISTS THE refunding was practically a foregone conclusion from that time and as a matter of $4@5. funding in other properties have also been | shorn lambs, $606.6216; clipped lambs, $507.50. thoroughly canvassed and the advantages pretty well discounted. In addition to this | @4.55 the size of the New York Central issue, $100,000,000, in addition to $12,000,000 for the Harlem proprietary branch, and the fact that $15,000,000 is to be used for new construction after 1903 caused some fears that the advantages to accrue to the stock by reduction of fixed charges had been overestimated. Nevertheless the reaction in New York Central after the formal announcement of the contract for the sale of the bonds was a disappointment to the traders, the more so as it extended to the other Vanderbilts by sympathy. The bond market displayed but little feature during the week, and prices generally eased off, with the international issues showing the widest recessions. The losses were largely restricted to fractions, although a few mortgages registered sharp gains. The sales were $3,976,000.

Plucky Battle Ended by a 12-Year-Old Girl with a Fence Rail. New York Sun.

"Vermillion county, in my State," said Maj. Hopson Gravely, of Indiana, "is a long but narrow division of the State lying along the westerly border. When the first settlers came into the northwest territory that part of it which was set apart after a time as Vermillion county, Indiana, was notable for being the home of a great colony of eagles-the big and genuine bird of freedom, whose spread early became likewise symbolical of the oratory of the Hoosier State which it continues to be to this

"The descendants of that colony of eagles-and doubtless some of the original members of it, for the eagle lives long and dies hard-still populate the scraggy fastnesses of Vermillion county, and purloin sheep and poultry with as much perseverance and dexterity, the residents of Vermillion county say, as some of their abut-ting neighbors over the Illinois side of the border ever showed, which places the Vermillion county eagle up near the head in that line of industry. The tactics of these eagles when making a raid are at times hold to the extreme of impudence, but one of the historic colony recently carried this holdness to a point that broke the record and incidentally his own head.

"Not far from the state line Joel Martin has a farm. He keeps a good many geese, as they are profitable things to raise in Vermillion county, where the old-fashioned feather bed still defies all modern beds and goose grease is as yet the only recognized and unfailing remedy for croup and quinsy. Farmer Martin's geese have the run of his place. A flock of twenty or more were pasturing in front of his house. Farmer Martin has a twelve-year-old daughter named Tillie. She was sitting at a front window darning a sock. Suddenly something dropped down upon the geese like a big stone falling from somewhere. A flock of geese can make a lot of noise when it starts out to do it, and no flock ever started out with the intention of making more noise than this one of Farmer Martin's did on this occasion, and the attempt was a success. One of Vermillion county's big eagles had swooped down upon the flock, had fastened his talons in the back of the biggest goose in it and was making a desperate effort to rise and soar away with his prey. But there was a little too much goose grease on the ribs of his intended victim, and he couldn't even lift the screeching goose from the ground.

"For a moment there was a great squabbling and fluttering and scattering of feathers in the yard. Then the goose. bearing the tugging and clawing eagle on its back, staggered and stumbled toward the house, making for the opening at the end of the stoop. The eagle held fast, and every other goose in the flock waddled after the two, falling over one another in their fierce but clumsy rush to aid their companion. The screaming of the geese was enough to make a panther stop and think the matter over, but a Vermillion-county eagle wasn't born in the craggy woods to be scared by tame geese, and he kept his hold, screaming still louder and harsher than the geese. "The goose with the eagle riding it ran under the stoop. Some of the other geese had waddled under after them, when the farmer's dog Trip came rushing on the scene. Trip was small and yellow, and had never distinguished himself except in the way of now and then a coon, but he had heard the unusual commotion among the geese, and without any thought of what he was likely to run against, dashed through the noisy geese and disappeared under the "All this occurred before Tillie Martin had time to drop the sock she was darning and rush out to take a hand herself in rescuing the goose from the grasp of the but she got there as fast as she By that time the fight had surged back from beneath the stoop to the open yard, and had become a general rough and tumble, in which geese, dog and eagle were so promiscuously mixed up that Tillie was afraid to bring into active service a fence rail she had grabbed for fear that she might carry more destruction among the geese and do more damage to the dog than she could inflict upon the eagle. "The eagle was plainly getting the worst of the fight, although he had ripped up half a dozen geese and disfigured the dog so that his pearest friend would scarcely know him. But the combination against the big bird was too strong even for a Vermillion county eagle and he was doing best to break away and take himself off. The dog was full of grit, and as the eagle managed to rise to clear the fence. Trip grabbed him by the fleshy part of one leg and held on. The eagle got partially over the fence, but the weight of the dog was more than he could contend against in that way, and he hung with his head and neck on one side of the fence, his great wings beating violently, and the rest of his body

MANY RECEPTIONS IN RUSHVILLE TO THEIR POLITICAL IDOL.

Baldwin Jury Retires to Make Up Its Verdict in the Marion Bribery Case-Other State News.

RUSHVILLE, Ind., April 17 .- This has been a week of Gowdy receptions in Rushville. First the Epworth League bade farewell to Miss Fannie Gowdy, daughter of Captain and Mrs. J. K. Gowdy. Then the women of the M. E. Church tendered a farewell to Mrs. Gowdy and Miss Gowdy. Tuesday afternoon Mrs. T. M. Green entertained in honor of the Gowdys the Monday Circle, or Literary Club. Wednesday night Joel Wolfe Post G. A. R. and the Woman's Relief Corps, to the former of which Capt. Gowdy has belonged for years, gave a farewell reception at the post room, in which addresses were made by the principal members. The farewell meeting at the colored M. E. Church last night was very demonstrative in honor of Mr. Gowdy and was attended by the colored population. This afternoon at the city opera house a public meeting was held and the country people were given an opportunity to say good-bye to the departing consul general-elect. The large auditorium was completely filled. F. J. Hall, a Democrat, presided. Addresses were made by Hon. James E. Watson, Editor A. B. Campbell, of the Graphic, and ex-Senator A. M. Kennedy. The address was the chief feature of the occasion. He reviewed Mr. Gowdy's public and private career, mingling with his commendatory remarks several good stories about 'Captain Jack." Captain Gowdy responded in a feeling speech and expressed his sincerest regrets on parting from his old friends. The audience then filed out in front of the stage, each person receiving a andshake from their political idol. night a public reception was given at the opera house to permit the townspeople to say good-bye to "Oom Jack." BRITISHERS ALARMED

FEAR THEY WILL LOSE THEIR PRESTIGE IN THE IRON INDUSTRY.

Ore Is Growing Scarce and Americans Are Stealing Their Market-The Soudan Campaign.

(Copyright, 1897, by the Associated Press.) LONDON, April 17 .- A column article in the Times points to the perils in prospect for the British iron and steel industries. The article, which is based on the Duke of Devonshire's address at the annual meeting of the steel company at Barrowin-Furness, dilates on the tact that for the first time in the history of her iron trade Great Britain has felt a scarcity of ores and the demoralizing effect of the imports of American pig iron having inlion tons of hematite ore from Spain and other countries. "Such sources are prethe threatened exhaustion of the ores in the north of Spain and the probable increase of the cost of ores procurable elsewhere, it is not too much to say that almost every iron-making firm in Great Britain engaged in hematite production, which is nearly half our total output, is anxiously concerned and apprehensive that a few years will see the end of the monopoly they have hitherto enjoyed in cheap iron output. While, however, it is probable that no second Bilbao is available, it is believed Spain still has large undeveloped resources in ores, many of which have been acquired by British firms."

The Duke of Devonshire referred to the astonishing cutting in prices by American competition and expressed a hope that the Americans might be satisfied to confine most of their fighting to their own country. This caused the Times to remark: "The American iron trade does not show any such intention. On the contrary, they are planning greater rivalry all along the line." Continuing the Times refers to the gigantic scale of the American iron-making plants now built and operated and instances the immense Carnegie furnaces and the newest type of Garret wire mills used in America and says the work thus produced is almost incredible, adding, as a significant feature of the situation, the statement that the recent plants built in England have adoped American methods, "While the Duke of Devonshire," . the Times continues, "practically admitted American superiority, he did not mention the most wonderful thing, the immense distances the ores and finished products have to be carried in America. English trade is still handicapped by heavy rall-way freights."

Why the Princess Fled.

LONDON, April 18 .- A dispatch to the Times from Paris says that the secret of the withdrawal of the Princess Chimay Carman, nee Miss Ward, of Detroit, from the Folies Bergere is found in the fact that friends of the family had resolved to place her children in the front row of the theater. A crowd of the Belgian friends of Prince Chimay had arranged to come from Charleroi. They were to simultaneously raise the cry of "To the madhouse!" Some of the Belgian friends of the Prince proposed to provoke a duel with Rigo. This challenge the companion of the Princess Chimay need not of course have accepted. Nevertheless the tragic side of her adventure, the correspondent of the Times concludes, may have been nearer than was RETURNED AFTER FIFTY YEARS. The Lad Who Went to Seek a Fortune Comes Back on Foot.

"Could you tell me the road to Sleepy Hollow?" asked an old man whose shoes were white with dust and he stopped at the junction of three roads near Andre brook. In his right hand he carried heavy staff, and pinned to the lapel of his coat was a beautiful yellow rose. The hany post road and had just passed the spot where the British spy was captured when he came to a bend in the road to Sing Sing and the road to Bedford. Now the town clerk's office stands there, and the town clerk, with the justices of the peace, who compose the board of canvassers, were there canvassing the vote on the local option question. John A. Lant answered the question, and directed the old man toward Sleepy Hollow. The old man then inquired about a certain house on the Coutant farm. The two were soon engaged in conversation. The stranger was Jacob Minnerly, a member of the well known revolutionary family by that name who lived in Sleepy Hollow years ago, before Irving gave that picturesque country its name. It was in a small house on the Coutant farm that he was born, sixty-six years ago. It was to see this house and the scenes of his early childhood that Minnerly had come. More than half a century ago, longing for adventure, he left home to seek his fortune. He sailed around the world, visited all its principal countries, but did not gather riches. Where he had spent his last year he did not tell. Mr. Lant took him in his carriage, and as they drove down the old road, Minnerly at once recognized Coutant hill and house, the old Jones homestead, where his grandmother, Mrs. Jones, lived; the Bill Carl house, the Furman house, and, lastly, the old schoolhouse, which he attended when Charles and Daniel Chamberlain were teachers. He visited the ew schoolhouse recently erected by John D. Rockefeller while the school was in ses sion, and made a few interesting remarks to the scholars, touching upon the difference in the manner in which the present school is conducted compared with the one of half a century ago. After signing the school registry, he journeyed down Broad-way to visit relatives in Tarrytown, whom he had not seen since he left home. The house in which he was born is now falling to ruin. He climbed about the brush and vines which now almost conceal it fro
